WRECK AT WEST GLENDALE

Fiendish Work at a Trestle—Two Killed, Twenty Injured—Six Cars Derailed

Most of the residents of this section are familiar with the wash that comes down from Verdugo Canyon and crosses the San Fernando road at West Glendale. They have frequently noticed the trestle-work about twelve feet higher than the bed of the wash, and about 100 yards long, upon which the two tracks of the Southern Pacific railroad cross the wash at this point.

Shortly after midnight Wednesday morning, the Coast Line Limited, behind time and running at the rate of thirty or thirty-five miles per hour, was derailed on this trestle and the whole train, with the exception of the engine and the two rear cars, was turned over into the wash. The bodies of two young men supposed to have been stealing a ride on the trucks, were taken from the wreckage, and a dozen or more who were injured are in the hospital. In the bed of the wash on the west side lie the remainder of the tender and six cars, strung along in regular order as they fell, except that the mail car is thrown off by itself ahead of and outside of the others.

The two mail clerks, Bruce Colton and F. Gay, were pretty badly bruised, the former being in the hospital.

Two Pullman coaches on the rear end of the train did not leave the track.

The engine and the cars following appear to have left the rails and dropped down on the ties immediately at the north end of the trestle, the engine running over the ties in safety until the south end of the trestle was reached. Here there is a slight curve to the westward, and at this point the tender broke loose and went over with the cars following. Had the engine gone over, the engineer and fireman would doubtless have lost their lives, with a strong probability that the wreck would have been ignited from the engine fire and a much more dreadful catastrophe resulted. As it is, the fact that only two lives were lost seems almost incredible. The car next the rear one lies flat on its roof, and how the others plunged over without more fatalities to the inmates, is very remarkable.

To those who were first at the scene, and for several hours following, until the evidence was removed, the cause of the wreck was very apparent. At the north end of the trestle, on the west side, the bolts connecting the rails and the spikes for half the length of the rail, had been removed. To the end of the rail thus loosened, a strong wire had been attached and fastened to a longer piece of barbed wire (evidently from the fence on the right of way) which was led under the other rail and the two rails of the other track on the east side. Here it was attached to a long piece of two-inch water pipe used as a lever, the lower end placed against the end of a tie for a fulcrum, and the infernal derailing device was complete. Whether it was fastened in some way to prevent the rail springing back into place, or whether the fiend who operated it stood by until the engine was on the trestle and then did the work, remains to be discovered.

We recall the Roscoe wreck and train robbery a dozen years or so ago, ten miles north of this, and remember that one of the convicted perpetrators of that act was a citizen of our valley in fair repute up to that time.

Wherever the culprit in the present case may be, it is to be hoped that the officers of justice may find him and we are thankful that in California train wrecking is a capital crime; but the miscreant who conceived and executed such a dastardly act cannot be given adequate punishment.

SALE OF THE CITY BONDS.

On Wednesday last the Adams-Phillips company of Los Angeles, the successful bidders for Glendale's first bond issue, received their bonds and turned over the following amounts to City Treasurer J. C. Sherer:

Principal	$5000 00
Premium	1047 00
Interest	67 50
Total	$6114 50

The bonds draw six per cent. interest, which, with the fact that the city has no other indebtedness, enabled them to be disposed of at so satisfactory a premium.

Mr. Parcher, president of the Board of Trustees, Mr. Woodberry, city clerk, and Mr. Sherer, treasurer, affixed their official signatures to the bonds, the latter official having to sign his name over 1600 times on the forty bonds. The last bond, payable forty years from last March, has eighty interest coupons attached.

Mrs. Hattie E. Gaylord, president of the local W. C. T. U., spent Wednesday, May 21st, at the Temperance Temple, Los Angeles, in attendance of the county executive meeting. The regular meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held at the M. E. church, May 31st. This is one week earlier than our regular time. Reports of county and state convention will be given by delegates who attended; also of the Mothers' Congress, by delegate. Some important items of business must come before the society, so we will need to meet for business at 2 p. m., sharp.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Street car strike in San Francisco unchanged; some cars running. Strikers resort to boycott.

Coast Line Limited derailed at Verdugo. Cannon wash, West Glendale, by train wreckers. Two killed, thirty injured.

Mayor Schmitz on trial in San Francisco, charged with extortion. Jury not yet complete. Ruef will probably testify against him.

Presbyterian General Assembly meets in Denver. Three hundred and fifty delegates present. James McNaughton, of Allegheny, moderator.

Secretary Root, at New Haven, makes notable speech, showing that the state of public morality is growing better, and that Socialism is decreasing.

Trial of Haywood at Boise proceeding slowly. Jury not yet empanelled, and new venire necessary. 'Tis said will probably consume six weeks after begin to take evidence.

Electrical power from Kern river turned on at Los Angeles over a circuit of 117 miles in length. Been four years in construction. Longest electrical plant west of Niagara.

Speaker Cannon, Senators Foraker and Fairbanks, reported to have combined forces with the Protective Tariff league, representing the "Stand Patters," to oppose nomination of Taft.

Judge Sanborn in United States court at Chicago, makes permanent the injunction against striking moulders of the Allis-Chalmers company, preventing them from picketing, etc., on ground of conspiracy to injure.

In San Francisco, the committee of seven, appointed by commercial organizations to bring about order in municipal affairs, resigns, alleging that it cannot get co-operation of Spreckles and Heney, who are prosecuting grafters.

The Pacific coast is coming more and more to discover the foolishness of so-called telephone competition. Generally the citizens make the discovery after experiencing the actual double burden and double nuisance. Richmond, California, however, has avoided the jump-in-the-dark policy, as evidenced by a resolution adopted by its chamber of commerce at the last regular meeting of that body, whereby the chamber "pledges itself to oppose the entrance of a second telephone company in Richmond."

At Athens, Ga., the Rev. J. H. Arnold was so incensed at his twelve-year-old son for playing ball on Sunday that he nearly beat the life out of him. An unappreciative judge sent the reverend gentleman to work on the rock pile for a term of days. Georgia is not so bad, after all!

"Purposely Overlooked"

Our esteemed contemporary on the Boulevard claims it was "purposely overlooked" in the "Business Directory" published by us.

As a matter of fact, the "Valley Independent (Newspaper) Brand bld and 4th st." was included in our Business Directory in its proper alphabetical place, in our original list, as shown by the proof retained in this office before the forms were sent to the Independent office for printing. When the Independent office turned the job out, however, the two lines of linotype had mysteriously failed to make any impression, had, in fact, "got lost in the shuffle." It was "small," really.

The Ascent of Mt. McKinley

The ascent of this highest mountain in North America was made by Dr. Frederick A. Cook and Edward Barrille, on September 16th last. The story of the achievement is told in the last number (May) of Harpers' Monthly. The mountain is the highest peak in the Alaskan range, its elevation 20,391 feet. The story of hardship and success is told in a vivid manner by Dr. Cook, who says that a voyage in search of the North Pole is a tame adventure in comparison.

Dr. Clark's achievement is probably of value to science, as he has mapped a region previously unknown, and some hardy Alpine climbers may repeat the achievement. But Mt. McKinley is not likely to become popular as a summer resort.

"Ian MacLaren"

"Ian MacLaren" is dead. If his death will lead to a wider reading of his works, it will not have been in vain. The wonderful blending of humor and pathos as found in his "Bonny Briar Bush" and its sequels, has rarely been excelled, and every lover of literature should be familiar with these sketches of the hard and outwardly unattractive Scotchman, full of tender compassion and the milk of human kindness, except when it comes to a question of theology!

The picture of the country doctor, traveling up and down night and day in all sorts of weather, just for the love of his profession and his kind, is one that should be in the mental gallery of every man and woman, to turn to in times of depression, when the megrims of pessimism get into the brain and tempt one to think badly of his fellows.

In San Francisco

In San Francisco, people who ride on street cars are subject to all sorts of indignities, insults and personal violence. Organized loafers hurl epithets, eggs and brickbats at men, women and children who dare to patronize the public conveyances which are under the ban of union labor. Employers at the head of large establishments, dreading the boycott, order their employees not to patronize the cars. There are said to be seventy thousand members of labor organizations in that city who approve of all this, and will obey the will of the walking delegates whom they have put in positions of authority. And this is not Russia, or Turkey, or China, but the "great and glorious" United States of America! "The land of the free"—and the home of Schmitz, Ruef and the Czar Cornelius!

On the Fourth of July the spread-eagle orator will "point with pride" to the achievements of 131 years of American independence; but let him not look towards San Francisco, unless in the brief six weeks intervening that city throws off the shackles it has forged about itself and highly resolves, and proves its resolution by its acts, that no longer shall freedom be a byword and liberty be hissed in the market place!

Against Taft

"Tis said that they have formed a combination against Taft for the presidency—Cannon, Foraker and the Protective Tariff League. The speaker of the house and the senator from Ohio represent the "stand-patters," while Taft is known to look upon our present tariff as a "creature not too fair and good for human nature's daily food." In fact, he does not regard it as sacred and unchangeable.

Cannon & Company claim that the tariff is all right and should not be changed in any particular, basing their contention on the admitted fact of the country's prosperity, and say we should "let well enough alone."

Taft represents what appears to us to be the higher statesmanship, in believing that there should be some changes in the schedules and does not believe that it is "well enough." Mr. Taft, for instance, does not believe that the products of our island possessions should be taxed when imported here, or at least should not be taxed as heavily as they are. He does not believe, either, that the tariff should any longer protect such of our great industries as can afford to sell their output in foreign countries cheaper than they are sold at the factory doors in the United States; that while the tariff was all right in their infancy, it may be all wrong in the lusty vigor of maturity. He probably also believes that the reciprocity idea as advocated by James G. Blaine is the true basis of agreement for the imposition of tariff duties between nations. It is probable that he believes that it is not good policy to impose an import duty upon any product which we cannot produce in quantities sufficient for the demand. We imagine also that he is sufficiently a statesman to be of the opinion that a tariff schedule for the United States should not be framed in accordance with the dictates of the Chamber of Commerce of Los Angeles, nor with the wishes of some factory concern down in Maine; but should be made to serve the best interests of the people of the United States.

If Mr. Taft's position is as stated above, we believe the stand-patters had better stand aside. The people at large will have something to say about the matter, and we doubt very much if any "stand-pat" plank can be put in the Republican national platform.

POULTRY DEPARTMENT.

Our poultry editor has not been earning his salt lately. Those hens set under his dictations six weeks ago, must have been making history since then. How many chicks did you say the old gray-back hatched out? Twelve—oh, a goodly number, forsooth; and how many are living? Six! No, never mind, you needn't tell us about it, we know just how it happened. It is really too bad that this department has not been kept up. We could have told you just what would happen. Now last week we got off on the owl question; but really the facts were so interesting and instructive that we may well be excused. Let's see—how twelve chicks were quite promising youngsters, weren't they? It's true there was one of them that was noticeably behind the others in development and did not take hold of life with a relish, and the old Spartan mother just pecked the life out of it to prove her adherence to the Darwinian theory as to the survival of the fittest. Then, one day, you put water in an old tomato can set in the ground, a great labor-saving scheme, for a quart of water lasts a brood of chicks a good while. And in the evening, when you went out to look at them you found one of the most promising youngsters drowned in the drink, To-bad, and we told you to use a small can and put a stone in it, didn't we? Perhaps, the next time you will be more implicitly everything we tell you about chickens. When you get to that point—well, let us hear from you.

Some people think that this department is edited in a spirit of levity but they are mistaken. You will find many a grain of wisdom in this column of chaff. But there are only two of the missing six accounted for as yet. You say the cat got the others? Good gracious, and it occurred only yesterday! My friend, if you don't g-gunning for that cat right away, there will be a chickless old gray-back here in your corral ere the evening sun goes down behind the western hills! Don't you believe that you can reform a chicken-eating cat; she will sit on the back porch step as demure and dainty as the most innocent thing that ever committed a capital crime, but don't you be deceived. She will sneak back to the henhouse and murder those innocent chicks one at a time and show up without any qualms of conscience. Why, any chicken raiser who will trust any hungry cat in close proximity to a brood of young chicks, is tempting Providence and advertising himself as an incompetent.

Why, it was only last week that our editor in chief, (who knows all about chickens and cats), had a little experience right along this line, and it's not safe to say "scat" to him since he paid a ridiculously fancy price for two settings of eggs warranted to be the product of a new brand of hens that will only lay when eggs are forty cents a dozen, and set them according to rules given in this department. Of course, they hatched out all right; every chick was healthy and chipper as possible, not one of them was drowned or got the cholera infantum or any of those things; in fact, the rules worked to a charm and he already saw a blue ribbon on the whole twenty-seven of them. Then, one night it seemed to him that there were not as many of them as there should be, and a count developed only twenty-two. This was depressing and mysterious, but when on the following day he found that the number had dwindled to seventeen, it was discouraging and awesome. Just as he was pondering over the mystery of these dreadful disappearances, a brown streak shot by him in the falling light, and the murderer was divulged in the household "Tabby." At last accounts the cat was still alive, but we have a suspicion that on Sunday morning when he is at home and the old cat sits on the back door step washing his face so gullelessly and harboring thoughts proper for the day, that the editor-in-chief with his new gun in hand and the lust for killing in his mind, will do something to spoil that beautiful picture of innocence on the rear step!

Some people have a superstitious fear of shooting a cat. In such cases it is very wrong to shoot one. The next best thing is to put it in a bag with a good-sized stone and plunk it into a barrel of water. Then, a slip noose over its head and the other end of the string tied to an immovable object, has been known to produce good results. But after all, this is a digression; although, as our narrative has shown, cats have a strong affinity for chickens, and we have not wandered astray after all.

Perhaps, you followed our advice and set two hens at once so that the double brood could be cared for by one mother. This does not work satisfactorily in the case of two full broods; twenty chicks is up to the limits of her capacity for mothering. Once upon a time the hen editor's wife went off on a vacation and told her other half to take good care of the young chicks. See that they did not catch cold and other things besides birds. There was a double brood of twenty or more as fine chicks as ever served as a foundation for blasted hopes when she left them. When she returned two weeks later, the remnant was a consumptive lot of hump backed chicklets, scarcely able to walk and incapable of running anywhere except at the nose. The trouble had been brought about by their all crowding into a close bunch at night, getting too warm in the center of the group and then moving to the outer edge to get cool and contract the pneumonia. And the fool things will do it every time. Take care of those six lonely chicks at night; it may not pay you very big but it will keep your conscience clear.

A Question in Natural History

My son, a toady is not a small toad; neither a large one. There is, in fact, no resemblance between the two animals. The toad goes by jerks; the toady crawls. The toad doesn't pretend anything; he is ugly and lowly, but he is useful. He catches bugs and flies and things. The toady lives largely on crumbs; should he get a whole loaf it would be fatal to him on account of the limited capacity of his organs and the fact that he doesn't know when he's had enough. Give him any more than a crumb and he would wake up the next morning and find himself dead. That is another thing the toady doesn't know. They are real dead a long while sometimes, without finding it out. Once upon a time a real dead toady was caught crawling along the street, looking for an Opportunity. A policeman picked him up with a pair of tongs and charged him with conduct unbecoming a corpse. He was never heard of more. As for the toad, you remember what our friend, Shakespeare, said, "ugly and venomous wears yet a precious jewel in his crown." But Shakespeare is not an authority on natural history; toads have stopped being venomous and don't carry jewels in their crowns now-a-days; they would be robbed before they traveled across the back yard. Do you remember what Shakespeare might have said of the toady?

"Oh, I have seen him basely crawl, when standing upright would have served his purpose better."

Mrs. Richardson is a cousin of Mr. Farrel and an old resident of Los Angeles, this being her first visit to that city after an absence of several years. Capt. Richardson is stationed at Fort McDowell, Angel Island. He and his wife have been on a short leave, taking in points of interest along the coast. On their return will visit Mrs. Richardson's sister, Mrs. Geo. H. Estes, of the Presidio of Monterey.

PRESBYTERIAN WOMEN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The regular monthly meeting of the Presbyterian Women's Missionary Society was held on Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. H. N. Harris, corner Third and C streets.

The Foreign topic, "Siam and Laos," was conducted by Mrs. Galloway, and the home topic, "Cuba and Porto Rico," by Mrs. Knight. Mrs. M. W. Crowell, of Alhambra, secretary of home mission work in the Presbyterian society, was present, and led the devotional exercises with a short and very helpful bible reading founded on the 103rd psalm.

She also brought a message from the Presbyterian ex-committee concerning the new objects of home work, the most urgent of which, in point of time, is providing the outfit for the large addition just made to the buildings for our Spanish school for boys and girls, at Tucson, Arizona.

Women in the Glendale church are desirous to communicate with the local officers concerning articles needed and what we can supply before June 3rd, so that a report can be made of what this society can furnish. The president of the Glendale society, is Miss R. M. Sherer; the secretary, Miss Judson Harris, and the treasurer, Mrs. Alice M. Ayres.

PROPOSED ROAD ALONG CHILD'S TRACT LINE. ENGINEER'S REPORT.

The city engineer of the city of Glendale has made a report and recommendation of which the following is a synopsis:

A street to be opened, 60 feet in width from the southerly city boundary line to Second street along the Child's Tract line, thence curving to the right to meet an extension of the Sycamore Canyon road. The name of the street to be Child's avenue.

(One of the principal objects of the proposed street is to carry off the storm water.)

As to the cost of improving Child's avenue, the distance from Ninth to Second street is 6400 feet, from Second street to the end of Sycamore road on the East, is 4500 feet. To improve this street by grading, curbing and rolling by the tamping-rolling process will cost about $1.25 per foot on each side of the street. On this basis the cost of the section from Ninth to Second street, will be $16,000. From Second street to the easterly city limits, 311,250, making a total of $27,250. There are about 600 acres within the city limits east of A street, the district which should be assessed for the cost. This would amount to $45.40 per acre. If the width of the proposed street should be made 50 feet instead of 60, the cost would be reduced about 12 per cent. In the engineer's judgment, however, the road should not be less than 60 feet.

The above are the salient points of the report. Some misapprehension seems to exist in the minds of many of the property owners, as to the result of the "Declaration of Intention" which the Board of Trustees resolved to pass as soon as it can be drawn up by the city attorney.

This Notice of Intention is merely the preliminary notice required for the opening of a street; and in this it does not mean an endorsement of the engineer's report in regard to other details.

The notice itself, when published, will state clearly its object.

WOMEN'S MISSIONARY CONVENTION.

The convention held here this week was in every way a success. Persons on program all did well. The local committees did their work in such a satisfactory way as to secure the commendation of all. There were a large number of delegates present, with many visitors. There are some numbers that we must mention as being remarkably good, by our home folks. The dialogue by four of our girls was so good as to secure the praise of all. This was rendered by Dorothy Lee, Grace Shropshire, Rachel McClure and Ruth Tarr. Children never did better than did these. The drill by the girls from the Grammar school, under the direction of Mrs. Ryan, with Miss Hendershott at the organ, was one of the most perfectly rendered drills that we have ever seen. Both of these were highly enjoyed by the large congregation that saw and heard. Mrs. Dr. Bryant sang in her usual charming way and touched all hearts.

The choir that always does well, never did better than on this occasion. The ladies quartet did grandly.

Mrs. Russell, who was in charge of the entertainment committee, did so well that she will be retained for all future occasions of like character.

The decorations were lovely and were under the direction of Mrs. Remsburg, who always does well.

The address of Dr. Howe on Wednesday evening, was a masterly effort and was greatly enjoyed.

Mrs. Harn was in charge of the drink supplies which were thorough, temperate and were of an excellent quality. It may be said of all "well done."

Glendale is to be congratulated on being chosen for this meeting place of this convention, and the delegates and visitors have seemed to enjoy being with us.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

Miss Warner was the guest of Pasadena friends Wednesday evening.

The physical geography class will go to San Pedro Saturday to study harbors, beaches and tides.

Miss Margardon, who recently received her master's degree at the State university, visited the science classes Tuesday forenoon.

The various athletic teams and associations held their elections Friday. Below is a list of the students selected for the duties of the coming year:

Boys' Basket Ball—Joy Goodsell captain; Clarence Emery, manager.

Girls Basket Ball—Alma Stone, captain; Louie McPeak, manager.

Tennis—Monroe Walton, captain; Dan McPeak, manager.

Athletic Board—Pearl Goode, Allen Davenport, Alma Stone, Melson Sprinkle and Dan McPeak.

Monroe Walton came near meeting with a serious accident while on his way to school Thursday morning. He was riding on his wheel at a high rate of speed along the street near the West Glendale school when he unsuspectingly struck a cut down in the street. He lost control of his wheel and landed head first against the curbing on the other side. The blow rendered him unconscious for some time, but he finally came around all right and discovered himself and is carrying around a swollen head and a stiff neck.

Clean Up

Glendale is soon to have a fire apparatus, and we believe it will be one that will be up to date and ahead of anything of the kind possessed by any other place in our class. But we do not want to have to try it, and everyone should be careful to guard against danger from fire. At this season of the year, nearly everything that fire can consume is in a dry and inflammable state and will be getting more so from day to day. We are surrounded by vacant fields and lots covered with dry grass which may catch fire at any time. Everyone who occupies a house in close proximity to such fields or lots, should make it a point to clear up around the edges, at least. Our city ordinance in regard to dumping papers and other trash, is not being observed as it should be, and there are some back yards, particularly about some of our stores, that ought to be cleared up at once.

Another matter that should be attended to by our Board of Trade, or some one else, is the clearing up of parkways along streets where sidewalk has recently been laid. Many of the lots are owned by non-residents, and it is essential that there should be some general action taken, or the condition will rapidly grow worse. Just now the ground and the weeds are in such a condition that four times the work can be done now that will be possible in the same given time two months later.

The most effectual advertisement of the fact that a town is dead, is found in the sidewalks infesting unimproved sub-divisions, overlapped with grass and weeds and suggesting a collapsed boom.

In the outskirts of the corporation some of these can be found, and in the busier part of town are plenty that need attention. As an instance, take the parkways along Fourth street from Glendale avenue to the Boulevard; they are not as yet in really bad condition, but are rapidly becoming so, as the weeds are growing fast. Two or three days' work by one man would make a great improvement along this thoroughfare.

Get busy, somebody!
Don't tempt Providence!
Clean up!

UNIQUE ENTERTAINMENT.

A unique and attractive entertainment which is to be given June 1st at 8:00 o'clock p. m., in the I. O. O. F. hall, is arousing much interest among those who have known of the enterprise, and it is the desire of these that the general public should know of the very commendable effort of the sixteen young girls comprising the L. C. D. E. club. This club is really a sewing-class, organized on Feb. 1st in the home of Mrs. B. H. Nichols, and is under her direction and tuition.

Dainty hand-painted invitations was the apparent beginning. Those responding were obliged to make, first, neatly and well, an apron; after which the girls sewed on whatever their taste or fancy dictated.

At one of their meetings, which occur on each Friday afternoon, the Rev. S. Lawrence Ward gave them a talk full of wit and pathos and real hard facts, with the result that the girls unanimously decided to support a young girl from among the mountain whites, clothing her and sending her to school, to correspond with her and make brighter her life.

Then the idea of the entertainment was received with enthusiasm, and the class has worked indefatigably for its success, as the proceeds will form the foundation of their fund.

The program will be a charming one, consisting of appropriate music and readings, and an especially attractive milkmaids drill, with the pretty participants in costume. Dairy lunches will be served and everything possible done to keep everyone interested and glad they came.

Monrovia

We learn by the Messenger that Monrovia was 21 years of age on the 17th; the first town lot having been sold there on the 17th of May, 1886.

The growth of the town was remarkable from the beginning; corner lots sold as high as $10,000 during the first year and $200,000 were spent in buildings. Then the boom collapsed and for several years Monrovia was as dead as a place can be and still stay on the map.

The writer passed through it in 1888, stopped over night at the one hotel in the town, with one or two other guests. At seven in the morning no one was visible on the streets and no business establishment open, not even the livery stable. The natives evidently believed in a resurrection and had confidence in their ability to awaken when the hour struck. And it finally struck; Monrovia awoke, girded herself like a giant for the fray and has since been making things hum. With rapid transit connecting it with Los Angeles, a foothill site of great natural beauty and a progressive class of people, Monrovia deserves all the good things that have come to her.

Remarkable Recovery

John Mulder, formerly owner of the buildings on the northwest corner of Fourth and Glendale avenue, called at the News office the other day. It will be remembered that Mr. Mulder was one of the victims of the runaway car on Aliso street five or six months ago. His experience was such as probably not one man in a hundred would pass through alive.
Several ribs were broken and portions of them had to be removed, as did also other parts of his anatomy.

The first three months of his existence immediately after the accident have entirely passed away from his memory; and many times since he has asked the doctors to put him out of his misery. Mr. Mulder is but a wreck of his former self, but is getting stronger every day and promises to regain a considerable portion of his former strength. He is free in his expressions of appreciation for the kindness shown him at the hospital, and of the skill of the surgeons who operated upon him.

THE EARTH AS A PLANET.

(By a Special Contributor.)

NUMBER I

To few of us in the busy whirl of everyday life does it occur to think of the earth as a planet; and when some times of an evening we obtain a brief respite from "life's petty cares," seek rest in some quiet garden and gaze around, perhaps in the moonlight at the "everlasting hills" and the silent sky and moon, we experience the most refreshing sensations of stillness and repose; and we feel that nature is sharing in the apparent immobility. Nothing, however, could be further from the fact. Again, as so often is the case, our senses mislead us, and certainly, "all things are not what they seem." This seeming repose and stillness, like everything else in this world, is only relative. We are being whirled through space with inconceivable velocity, and the mountains which seem so immovable, are part of a great globe which is subject to many complicated motions; and the "quiet stars" are all rushing in their "appointed courses" with tremendous speed. We do not feel the motion of the earth because all things on it, and the atmosphere around it, are carried with it. We do not see the motion of the planets and stars because they are so far away that it can only be detected by careful measurements and in some cases at great intervals of time.

Descending, however, from these great generalizations, let us consider some of the chief facts relating to the earth as a planet. Its distance from the sun, its size, shape and motion, and their approximate effect on human, animal and vegetable life on our whirling world.

The earth is the third planet from the sun, from which it is distant about thirty-six million miles, and Venus, a mean distance of sixty-seven million miles, and we can well imagine that no living beings with which we are acquainted could exist in the great light and heat which must continually reach these planets on account of their proximity to the sun. Similarly, any inhabitants of planets farther from the sun than we are, must be very differently constituted from any with which we are familiar, on account of their remoteness from the sun's life giving beams. But we are nearly ninety-two million miles from the sun and it is a stupendous distance! Why can we realize it? A cannon ball, maintaining its initial velocity of 1540 feet per second, would take nine years and eight months to cover it! This distance of the earth from the sun forms the unit of all astronomical measurements, upon which they are all based and therefore it has formed the subject of most careful and minute observations and calculations. Six different and independent methods of computing the distance, calculated by many different astronomers, in many parts of the world, have pretty accurately established the same result, and agree within a few hundred thousand miles. Thus we know that Neptune the remotest planet of the Solar system, is 30 times farther from the sun than is the earth; and that the distance of the nearest fixed star is 275,000 (two hundred and seventy-five thousand) times greater than the same unit, the distance of the earth from the sun.

But this distance is not constant. The orbit of the earth being slightly elliptical, we are three millions of miles nearer the sun on the 1st of January than we are on the 1st of July. This fact, however, and its effect on the climate of different parts of the earth, we shall consider more in detail in their proper place, later on.

And having now a clear conception of the position of the earth in the sky, we must leave it suspended in imagination, trusting to set it in motion in a future article.

IN SAN FRANCISCO.

Under date of May 23rd Mr. N. C. Burch, who is on his way to Oregon, writes from San Francisco:

"Two days' observation and careful study of the situation here satisfies me it is not near as bad as represented in the sensational reports of news paper correspondents. True, there are instances of disorder and lawlessness, but when were there not in a great city like this? Of course, the Carmen's strike has been the cover of many dastardly offenses by the gangs of hoodlums and anarchists that infest the city. They are not the acts of the Carmen—motormen and conductors—who have been running the car lines of the city for so many months past. I have met a number of these carmen, looked into their eyes and listened to their conversation and I am satisfied they are not as a rule of that class of men who resorts to acts of violence as a means of accomplishing their purposes. But, of course, all that might be said of a truth on this line will not relieve them of the odium of the outrages committed in their 'sympathy' by thugs and outlaws. The trouble is that while the Carmen had a perfect right to quit work after due notice either as individuals or as a body, they had no right to put their grievances in the hands of professional agitators for correction, in view of the lawless methods of such disturbers to bring about such adjustments. Laborers have an undoubted right to combine for the promotion of their interests, but they have no right to combine in unlawful enterprises for such an end.

"Generally, matters here have settled down to an orderly rivalry between Calhoun and the Carmen for the passenger traffic of the city. The car lines are operated throughout the day, but they are flanked by continuous streams of vehicles of every description 'loaded to the guards,' drawn by horses of every stage of life and condition of endurance. At the crossings of Third and Mission and Third and Market, are spectacles long to be remembered for the tense earnestness of the contest. It is orderly, if not dignified.

"As to the graft and the municipal government—That has settled down to a distinct line of scheming for control between Spreckles and Herrin, with advantages in favor of the former. The prospect is that Schmitz will continue the nominal head of the municipal government, ultimately with headquarters at the city jail, under the menacing terrors of the 'big stick' and the guardianship of a citizens' auditing committee—serving as a 'check' upon all business dealings of the various departments.

"I continue my northward trip at 4 p.m. Expect to reach Marshfield, Oregon, my present destination, Friday.

"Truly,
"N. C. BURCH."
